gravelortian part 23

by Chad Smith

Monday and my daughter is in line at the bank Observing her from the bench across the way This should go as easy as we have planned Hand the teller the note and she fills the bag Eye the security guard who doesn't look back Relaxed and casual hurry out the door fast

Friday comes wistfully now from the left
Under the hood of the car my son looks and laughs Can't believe I was able to drive this far Kick the tire and tell him of the dream that Ends with a daughter I imagine to have who Robs a bank of millions then disappears when I wake