

summer fields

by Ed Higgins

we ran that afternoon
across Bayshore lanes

into green blooming fields, beyond all those

quickly passing eyes,
helping each other

down a graveled bank
that edged tall grasses

topped in yellow mustard & skimmed by meadowlarks, that scolded, yet never told as far as we knew--

although they saw well enough.

