In the Stream of Space Expanding, Eddies

by Gary Hardaway

It is what it is and does what it does. It has no will, no purpose, no plan. It behaves as it behaves in the pattern and consequence of things as they are. Microscopic purposes emerged with their combinations and permutations and we, willed and scheming inheritors of strung out sequences of possibilities, impose our plans and purposes, unabated, until conditions change enough to stop us, dead.