Vanishing Point

by Gary Hardaway

We see stereoscopically. The left and right eyes combine in the brain the minute angular difference each one brings and in the great, great distance the two become one where all things end, conjoined.