

Boundaries

by Aaron Sabatine

Hands and fingers feeling down
Cross the boundaries I laid
Sparks shatter my soundless world
Fulfill the wish I should have made

I want to feel like this forever
Lost in your loud world, all color
Dreaming through a lonely vessel
Living just to touch each other

Watch the dark hide your desires
Wrap yourself in reds and yellows
Lay yourself across my threshold
Forget the world and all its troubles

But time was slow and we were fast
Our fears rained down to drown our flames
We passed the day, refused the night
I thought of you and laughed and cried

All that's left - this thread of words
It's strong enough to pull you in Or tie me up, make you a prison
I watch your mouth, it cuts my hands
