Journey by Alba Brunetti

my pilgrim tongue on the map of your body seeks sanctuary on this long road I am weary with longing and hungry for you let me rest beside you and feel the sweet shelter of your skin

I have traveled many deserts and my heart is faltering the day is almost gone take me in let me rest and in this holy night, unexpected yet longed for I taste your salted divinty