The Krafft-Ebing Poems

by Bill Yarrow

Case #106

when she was about ten years old she thought that her mother no longer loved her so she put matches in her coffee to make herself sick that she might thus excite her mother's affection for her

Case #88

on account of his impotence the patient applied to Dr Hammond who treated his epilepsy with bromides and advised him to hang a shoe over his bed and to look at it fixedly during coitus while at the same time imagining his wife to be a shoe

Case #8

as a child he was not affectionate and was cold toward his parents he was well endowed mentally and given to much reading but eccentric after puberty alternating between religious enthusiasm and materialism now studying theology now natural sciences at the university his fellow-students took him for a fool he read Jean Paul almost exclusively

Case #89

on his marriage night he remained cold until he brought to his aid the picture of an ugly woman's head wearing a night cap coitus was immediately successful

Case #36

she must stand at the window awaiting him with her face done up and on his entrance into the room complain of severe toothache he is sorry for her asks particularly about the pain takes the cloth off and puts it on again he never touches her sexually yet finds complete satisfaction simply in this act

Case #55

on their wedding night he forced a towel and soap into her hands and without any other expression of love asked her to lather his chin and neck as if for shaving the inexperienced young wife did it and during the first weeks of married life was not a little astonished to learn the secrets of intimacy in this way alone

Case #102

the patient in a circle of erotic ideas grows more and more peculiar he avoids the society of women associates with them only for the sake of music and ONLY when two witnesses are with him

Case #83

his dreams are filled with aprons
