

Wilmington

by Cami Park

Me, my brothers, the neighbor kids, playing outside in our dandelioned yard. The tree house, the mulberries, my older brother teaching us to burp on purpose. Strangers walk by. The neighbor kids start, we join in— go back to Africa, go back where you came from. The words are steel marbles in our mouths.

