

Twelve Pens

by Carl Santoro

Meeting room quiets.

Writer's desks

vibrate.

The room invaded.

This is the last

page their lives will write.

Their last story on the walls

and floor in the marks

told by their blood.

A fallen coffee cup

somehow a reminder of life as it was.

Abandoned pens

roll off the desks.

