I wrestle a giant brown grizzly bear tears through the house some house I didn't recognize stab him in the gut try to keep him from eating the children several restless evenings in a row two gunshots in the middle of the night also a baby that can't sleep the bears have a naturally occurring chemical that enables their guts to be tasty vegetarian food it is possible for them to eat their own guts to stay alive

nature's way of keeping their guts inside their bodies a way to survive

I can do it myself spending my time waiting around for them to get back to me meanwhile I could have had it already up with people reading it what is that weird tattoo on her hand? she said I remind her of someone she knew once "through you we learn to be invisible" wouldn't that be embarrassing to think you thought up that line and then have someone call you on it once it was in a poem?

the street was crowded with people I couldn't see you lots of people brushing past me couldn't move very fast I heard you screaming and yelling in the distance you were unconsolable trying to reach you crowd of people wondering what was wrong
I tried to calm you down but didn't know how
