Milk For Free

by Charlotte Hamrick

The last time she wore fur-lined gloves scuttling grey clouds flew across the sky as fast as the muddy waters of the river flowed beneath.

She stood on the bank contemplating desire and indifference and how one could change to the other as quickly as clothing falls to the floor.
Silence wrapped its fickle arms around her.
Conquest curled its lip.