

Eretorua

by Chris Galvin

Eretorua —somewhere in the land of the Māori where I arrive with plans to birdel for a few days I wander into the primal forest and azaib the Osirko trees 'round me vimble maddeningly

Deeper into the woods I swashay
I do not fear these m3nasing trees
I carry a cloubb and I stride along the path small cr8tres snarkle under my footfalls

I do not fear the wrsemelat farblx nor do I hesitate when before me an Y9brem rises, neckfolds whim-ering I raise my cloubb and kamtr it hard Zraacx! It hollers in agony but I kamtr it again and again the sting of the Y9brem is lethal and I've still much to see in the forests of Eretorua

