

Upstream

by Claire King

I was born nowhere and couldn't wait to leave. Going with the flow on to bigger and better things.

But home won. Tugged at my core until I found myself moving against the current. Back to nowhere, just like all the rest.

Nothing there had changed.

I found a mate, made babies, prepared to die.

