

I'm Feeling the Monkey Around your Neck Isn't Quite Listening

by Darryl Price

The sky's hand's so big and so vast that it takes our huge sun at the end of day and squeezes it down to a perfect diamond-- just like Superman with a lump of coal-- poof!-- obliterates it. And it's gone.

Next day it's seen floating around everywhere again, like an inflatable beach ball. I can make that one word if I want to-- this isn't scrabble you know. All of which points us to the point. I can make that a period. Let go of me. Just listen.

There's a tune out there taking its own particular time to pitch a note just for you. It wants obviously to please you. Personally I don't care. I only want to know when to give my sad slide the flesh and blood it so desires. It's a harsh universe. What's that you're always saying to me? Christ, if I actually believed that was all there was to this breathing I would exhale only. Here is something taking shape in space just for you. And there is no other you.

Damn the critics to a lashing hell of their own sour tongues. I can't make it last one minute longer, or stop it going off the final trail any shorter than what it takes. Okay? It will on the surface appear to be nothing more than words. Granted oh wise one.

But so do a lot of things. Figure it out. What I mean to say is I hope there's more to this than that. Why don't we sit back and see what dreams happen next? I'm glad you're here. There.

I guess it all comes down to mundane seating arrangements after all, dear one.

Bonus poems:

I'm Bored With Your Tomorrow Discounts

by Darryl Price

Thank you for your support. I just want to walk in the park.
Your failing infrastructures, your college savings plan. As I look around all I see are your marmalade cowboy politics. I just want to walk in the park. Your online contests, your easy chicken dinners, vehicle safety features. I'm sick to death of your limited time offer.

Just let me walk in the park.
Your expert advice. Shadow always looming over me.

Give me breathing. Give me bees.

I just want to walk in the park. Genuflection to the dark angel of our nature.
It's gross. I just want to walk the park. Give me the shoulders of Venus. Try coming down.

Clouds and Everything and Mountains by Darryl Price

We chanted to the sun. Chanted to the moon. We chanted to the stars. We chanted to the grass. We chanted to the trees. We chanted to the oceans pouring over our heads. We chanted to the winds.

We chanted to the new flowers.
Only the flowers appeared to be listening. Because of this profound understanding between us we fell deeply in love with everything. Little did we know that love attracts a lot of bugs.

Bugs have no sense of decorum.
They only know to congregate and make a lot of buzzing noise before they expire in great heaps.
This made us laugh. Well it made me laugh but only because it was a scene that also had your ears in it. We made a fire out of just the two of us holding the universe in our eyes and that became something worth knowing. I was not the one who would hurt you.

I voted for Strawberry fields forever. You bought the dream you were eventually handed.
That gave the story an ending I'd never have thought of as good.

A Sudden Window

by Darryl Price

There is someone looking for you for him or herself. I don't know if they'll keep on looking forever when we live our present lives so far apart from each other. You might as well be behind a glass at all times. But I still would want that lucky person to somehow reach you and get consent to hold you.

That would make the whole world worth it.
Even if I can never see that feeling or feel that sighting myself. There's someone who completes your chemical composition as himself, but he may not be that unselfish. He may refuse to know you as you are, and that would break my heart for you. Coming close to being almost complete is not the best way to walk through this ticking down life. But maybe he'll feel the inevitable pull, break the glass, or maybe the spirit of the glass'll recognize him and open itself up like a sudden window or a door inside the air. That's a moment I wish for you. That's all I'll say.

The Unbearable Heaviness of Selfies

by Darryl Price

All you haters spreading poison. Poison kills. Hate is dumb. How many have you harmed? Why do you have to be so cutthroat? Hate is dumb. Is my calling hate dumb politically incorrect? The tragedies of war have come to our door. Hate is dumb.
War is dumb. Haters murder truth. Words hang in the air because they can't believe in themselves. Hate is dumb. John made the mistake of teasing weak men with guns. You can't tease a man with a gun. Or a hat.

Or a uniform. Hate is dumb. War is dumb. Death gives lillies a bad rap.
Hate is a crime against the practice of kindness.
Soldiers will shoot unarmed students if given the right order. How many numbers make up a soul?

How many poets are alive in the world today?
Don't care. People aren't numbers. Hate is dumb. The world is sick and no one wants to do anything about it. It makes me sad, but that doesn't mean I'm not happy. I'm not, but certain things make me glad to believe in the magic of being here.

But dumb hate is not one.
All you haters so sure of your propaganda against love and compassion.
It is never too late. Hate kills happiness.
Generates suffering.

Hate is dumb. Life goes on.
In this we're together.

The Tiger Who Jumped Over the Moon

by Darryl Price

Lord knows we all tried to stop him from doing it. You're crazy we said. This makes you look like a lunatic. They'll hunt you down in even heavier droves now. You've upset their delicate memories. I tried to stop it. That's cow territory my friend I said but it didn't matter. He had made up his mind to jump and mean to and so he did. I'm going to miss petting his fuzzy head as we walked through the jungle together. It wasn't so much that I felt safe with that tiger but I preferred his growl to almost any other sound. It made me feel glad to be alive. Anyway what's done is done. He's gone. One day I'll be gone. Maybe we'll see each other again and the laugh will be on something other than us. Or maybe it doesn't matter.

He's gone and so is a pretty big chunk of the world. It was funny. A tiger taking a flying leap over the moon like that. Many astronomers were puzzled by what they were seeing in their telescopes that night, that's for sure. I don't think that's why he did it. I think he just wanted to feel something else for himself. To see if there was more to it all than this barroom brawl we've been handed. I see some stars look a little more like tiger's teeth tonight. Thanks for the grin my friend.

I'm writing you this poem because it's all I've got left. You know what it's for.

Mirrors/srorriM

by Darryl Price

It's weird to be here. I wonder if you are here too. You'd probably say oh that was years ago. And you would be right. But I like the things we believed in then. Some of them I still do. You're old I guess. You were so pretty and golden in your new bathing suit. And I was too skinny from smoking too much and eating too little.
But I was always up for writing you another lovesong. I don't know if we had troubled minds. We had aching hearts. And there didn't seem to be much relief for that.

But still we laughed a lot. And we knew how to take care of each other. That's something.
I don't like to hear the people calling other people monsters. It makes me think of broken mirrors. Trees full of them. Stars flashing them like knives. Windows on houses where no one has seen a living face in years. It's weird to be here, incapable of talking with you without missing the smallest things, except through a bunch of typed out words on a computer screen. I used to love my typewriter. The way it pressed each letter deep into the paper's dough, the crowded sentences starting to line up like chattering concert goers with thrills and unknown expectations in their eyes. We held hands once and it seemed like the only safe thing that made any real sense to me in the world. Now I'm like one of those guys walking alone on the beach, no big dog, no favorite frisbee, just a goofy fishing hat and some sunglasses.

Not wanting to know what time it is, but being able to tell any way by the color of the sand and sea. You learn a few solid things and try to forget everything else. It's weird to be here. I'm still me. I wonder if you're still you. The you that was the most beautiful person in the room of beautiful people. I liked looking for you. And I liked finding you. It's weird to be here. Now is such a far away place to be. And here isn't much better. I wanted to say that I'm sorry, but I don't know what for. We had dreams that came and asked us to get into different cars. I didn't want you to go with them. I didn't trust them, but I trusted you. It's weird to be here. The world is still as cruel as a snake. It hasn't gotten any kinder. I hope it has been kind to you. Weird. But not so wrong I suppose. You knew how to smile. Everyone said so. I admired that about you. My crookedly round face could only try to almost get it right, feeling mostly out of place in every place, except when I was anywhere with you. Not so much a miracle, let them say, but we know, it was our little secret. It's weird. I made it into the poetry papers, but you're not here to read them. It's weird to be here. It's not where I thought I'd be. It's a rotten town everywhere you go. But I wouldn't call it a wasted life. We just didn't know it would call us to leave each other forever to the other side of the moon. But I look up and I smile.

Falling Rocks

by Darryl Price

Not sure I remember what's important, but I remember you.
That's the whole problem I think. You're a drain where all my words end up ending up. All of them get lost inside you. Eventually. And I'm left with nothing to say. Because all my words are gone like toothpaste.

The few I've got left only seem to repeat themselves in pathetic smears. But they'll have to do. Not sure I can remember anything important, but I say your name in my sleep. It's all become a boring animal ritual.
I can admit that. But I remember you used to wear this yellow teeshirt all the time like it defined something impossible about you and your motion inside dark jeans.

It drove me mad with desire. And that made you laugh. Which drove me over a cliff, into an ocean, and left me clinging to slippery rocks for dear life.
So not sure I remember one important thing about anything if you want to know the truth. But I know the song that made you sit still and look at things like they were puzzles you were putting together in your head with a little seductive dance. How else am

I going to describe the sadness back to you now?
When you're not even listening. And my readers are expecting me to swing this crazy thing around and show them the secret room inside of themselves. But a broken heart can only make cubist desk paintings out of its overly hoarded toy stuffs and hope for the best. I can't remember what's important to me any more. It was so clear to me just yesterday. Oh. Open my eyes. Let me see a way. Let me swim before I drown.
Let me swim before I wash away. I remember you as important but I can't seem to remember why. The words won't tell me. I'm not sure they think we deserve to know the reason. Or they just might be trying to protect us from the tilting sun. Oh. It's too late for that. Oh, open my head. Let me see before I go completely blind from all the salt in my own eyes. Running down my face. For all of us who are left let my words fight for air. For all of us here let my words continue to look for fair meaning. And kiss you goodbye. For all the lonely floating pieces let my wrecked words shine through the slumber of time and ruin. Night and day. Open the curtains. I remember you. You were the question I guess I needed to hear from this life. Thank you for asking me. It was a beautiful way to say hello and a hard way to say goodbye as the next question on the horizon became more solitary in its insistence on authenticity. Maybe what was so important is not important.

But it remains with me. And I wouldn't want you to think of it in any other way than love.

We Are Not Those Responsible for planes that lose their precious bombs like someone's been careless in spitting one rotten tooth after bloody rotten tooth all over the greenest of forest grounds like saliva covered seeds with no more thought to the consequences below the radar than to the awakening hunger pangs of yet another dying day for the poor disfigured animals who used to be gently drinking children or for the murder of ancient and wise guardian trees in the night for starved dogs who forever must endure their torturers

September 12, Lucky Number challenge

My lucky number is mushroom.
My lucky number is bat. My lucky number is pear. My lucky number is Milky Way. My lucky number is cricket. is cloud. is seahorse. Is learning a lucky number? I think it is.

My lucky number is waterfall.

My lucky number is dragon-- which is timeless but also maybe untameable so really it just might zero things out. My next lucky number is daughter. Then there's the poem--in which we are all allowed to say I'll get that right over to you out loud and mean it. You'll say it's love.

P.S. My lucky number is mercy. My lucky number is Beatle. My lucky ones come with their own regiment of angels.

