Things being said

by Darryl Price

Things are still being said in a world that sounds like rough bows and straight slicing arrows communicating with (smashing like fists) a poor pool of tired animals. There must also come a time to surprise these same cruel machines with metal striking metal of our own making. Things are being said that arrive like capsized canoes floating face-down in the pungent red coves boiling someone's dinner all around us. There must also come a time to know the answer has been given, beautifully sealed by indestructible thoughtful thinkers in timeless bulbs. Dreams are being said that are sleeping at your silence, fizzing out another's sweet love songs. There must also come a time to hang up all the ancient fears and once more believe roses can grow roses. Things are being said as though you survived all the mistakes engraved on your flesh, only to see the earth becoming a blinking mess of lights. There must also come a time to run like a sweet madman to the arms of your lover's deepest kiss. Things are being said that'll remind you we are still betrayed, we are like lost donkeys bawling together. There must also come a better time to rise up and stop being Available online at http://fictionaut.com/stories/darryl-price/things-being-said Copyright © 2014 Darryl Price. All rights reserved.

so stupidly alone again. Things are being burned like shells half gleaming in sinking sand. There must also come a time to dance on one foot for our many lost friends. Things are being said that I'd much rather not hear at this time either. There must also come a time to listen to the rainfall and nothing else, my friend. Not all the things being said are done by us.

Bonus poems:

Birds Fly(original draft)

by Darryl Price

Birds fly and people focus on finding their still point. Birds fly and people wait for love, but I wouldn't. Birds fly and people think about beauty. Birds fly and people become frustrated. Birds fly and people drown in little rooms. Birds fly and people like strange words cast huge shadows. Birds fly and people make mocking landscapes out of balloons. Birds fly and people frighten themselves in the mirror. Birds fly and people fold like origami horses. Birds fly and people ask for blessings under their breath. Birds fly and people die of old age on fire escapes. Birds fly and people will take horrible vacations in their mind's lonesome valleys. Birds fly and people are programmed to be the problem. Birds fly and people don't remember soon enough. Birds fly and people pour a glass of water. Birds fly and people hurry in the wind and rain like it's a matter of pity. Birds fly and people run on the grass until nothing is left but bones. Birds fly and people go down the stairs. Birds fly and people say little to each other. Birds fly and people wave.

How to Remember Important Things(First Draft)

by Darryl Price

Save the whales. Save the dolphins. Save the bored housewives. Save my hands, so often cupped over the sorrow in being alive. Save the beautiful made-up cherries of delight I feel everywhere in your presence. Save the sprawling landscapes of late night cafeterias of the mind. Save the often forgotten radios of our flying dreams. Save the hand-printed love letters of early morning light. Save the inexhaustible curiosity of a small interior poem of silence. Save the naked air. Save the Spanish tongue of Neruda. Save the sparkle in the brushstrokes of a Picasso. Save storm and the rainbow. Save the North Sea. Save shadows. Save all hearts from beginning to break again. Save the ripped apart sky from the rain of so many angry bombs sneaking inside. Save the secret handshake. Save the Pandas. Save the sea turtles. Save the roses. Save the last dance. Save the sailing boats and floating planes of melting romance. Save whatever makes no sense. Save this feeling. Save the butterflies with passionate, provocative kisses. Save the question of imagination. Save the end of the poem until you really need it. Save the world from itself. Save your wild goodbyes. Save every word.