

Who Doesn't Care Headline

by Darryl Price

Hello. That's as good a funny place to start a new stitch as any. Who knows if our picture will finally look like us, even if we've chosen a duck foot pattern to follow, life is strange. Some things are to remain ghosts, unknown, unexpected.

You've got to dance through the various surprises in the music of your own morning. If you shut down the music, it will only find a way to continue to flow out some other window, with or without you. You're still invited but no one can accept the invite or your part for you. Go.

Act out the latest craze.
There's always someone who doesn't care if you live or die. I don't blame you.
They turn a blind eye. But there are some amazing sounds happening right now beyond beautiful in the magic moment where you are living. You can't hold them in your heart's lap forever, but you can experience this feeling of dear knowing that is now. All you need is love, go ahead, say the word, but there's always more to come, shining all around us.
