"Beauty is an experience, nothing else. It is not a fixed pattern or an arrangement of features. It is something felt, a glow"..

--D. H. Lawrence

It's not about the lasso. That's so easily dangerous, essentially a Petty concept. Instead it's always going to be about you, learning To accept and respect what awesome powers it represents, that It'll so quickly place into your sore and bleeding hands Like a pile of crushed ice. It's an immediate thing, a felt stinging responsibility. There must

Ever be striking the cold clang distance between what usage Does while in your care to yourself and what changes It may bring forth in all others just as it's Finding justice for fashion or for ill—because you'll likely be Strumming along with your own body inside these rollercoaster emotions. And that

Will likely have its own lingering consequences for answering to for the Rest of your life; a mission you're expected not to Survive. But the grand mystery of things has never been Solved to my own personal satisfaction either. And so I believe there's every Chance you'll find a lasting Grace with which to walk away and live out your own lasting presence in this world and possibly any other.

"It's not what you look at that matters, it's what you see." - Henry David Thoreau-
