

Your Boredoms

by Darryl Price

Your boredoms are not my fascinations. Your boredoms Belong to the ice caves with the Mammoths, Although haven't they been tortured enough by the Changing winds? Your boredoms are far from twinkling

Objects in the beaks of ancient crows, prophesying A new age of heartbreak and misunderstanding. Your Boredoms, I'll do my best to escape them,
But that means you, too. Your boredoms need

To disappear permanently. Your boredoms send a frightened Animal into the thorns of no contest, I Wonder if you could be more gentle? Your Boredoms have never sung into the wind, have Always bent themselves towards the death of innocents.

Your boredoms don't love babies. Your boredoms are Sharing a joint in a back alleyway at Almost dawn. Your boredoms are like my head

Hurts. Take it or leave it. Your boredoms Having already used the key, have left the Door unlocked. Your boredoms like the flu are Taking a long nap. Your boredoms have set

The wordless table. Your boredoms are upturning the Waiting guitars with miserable glee. Only the shadows Agree. Your boredom's pockets are full of damaged Money. Your boredoms are missing a foot, maybe

A few fingers, certainly a heartbeat. Your boredoms Are moving noiselessly towards cynicism. Your boredoms, like The rest of the sheep, are floating with Nothing to guide them but their stomachs. Your Boredoms are making me feel sunk, falsely accuse Every star of failing to shine. Your boredoms Have thrown my poetry into the bushes. Your Boredoms have come home minus that impossible kiss.

Bonus:

a friend of mine who wishes to remain anonymous sent this remix.
I love it!

Your boredoms are not my fascinations Your boredoms belong to the ice caves,
with the Mammoths,
although haven't they been tortured enough by the changing winds? Your boredoms are far from twinkling objects in the beaks of ancient crows, prophesying a new age of heartbreak and misunderstanding. Your
boredoms, I'll do my best to escape them,
but that means you, too.
Your boredoms need to disappear permanently. Your boredoms send a frightened
animal into the thorns of no contest, I wonder if you could be more gentle? Your

boredoms have never sung into the wind, have always bent themselves towards the death of innocents.
Your boredoms don't love babies Your boredoms are sharing a joint in a back alleyway, at almost dawn. Your boredoms are like my head hurts. Take it or leave it. Your boredoms having already used the key have left the door unlocked. Your boredoms like the flu are taking a long nap Your boredoms have set the wordless table
Your boredoms are upturning the waiting guitars with miserable glee. Only the shadows agree. Your boredom's pockets are full of damaged money. Your boredoms are missing a foot, maybe a few fingers, certainly a heartbeat.
Your boredoms
are moving noiselessly towards cynicism.
Your boredoms, like the rest of the sheep, are floating with nothing to guide them but their stomachs. Your boredoms are making me feel sunk, falsely accuse
every star of failing to shine. Your boredoms
have thrown my poetry into the bushes. Your boredoms have come home minus that impossible kiss.

