Apologia

by David Ackley

I am not supposed to be here where the walls run red with sonnets and mitigation. No, I did not do it, or if I did, I didn't mean to, or if meant, revision sieved the occasion,

saving only the smallest pieces.

Rythmic thuds, a crackle as of shells underfoot.

Laughter before the show.