

consolations

by David Ackley

we swim in failure
and a weak grasp of the infinite

the last good job poisoned by envy and strewn tacks

a kind of fractured ease in this sinking

you think of where you'd rather be

Nothing.

those were
the years of atomic submarines
otherwise pleasant

