

Dog Meat

by David Ackley

Ahead, two of the long-snouted dogs pull flesh from the bloated carcass of a third. Rios raises his weapon, curses, and lowers it. McHenry heaves a rock, one yips, they move off a few feet and sidle back once the squad files past. Everyone is thinking the same thing.

