

Whip Poor Will

by David Ackley

Save your delirium
scrabbling at the glass
your darkness
coiled hissing in its corner for corpse orations
staked in the heart of verbs sun unsheathed

the blistering,

the seething streets
Poor Will, whipped
in this siege and
seethe of silence.

