

you weren't this way

by deborah brandon

i was in the fields, i was moss, was sticking my head in the columbine i held a cramp inside an easter egg buried a pewter man shallow but the dark over him so fine and full of worms; a real moon just glints on the ground like quartz on the way to the outhouse past midnight past caring

