

four haiku

by Ed Higgins

years later ghosts enter the moonlight's slant winter's crop of steady snow filling the garden fog swirl the suet feeder sways apple orchard —

wild turkeys

eating windfalls

