

Poem for the betraying Lover and his new Love

by Ed Higgins

Wishing he holds you all night, unshaven chin between your breasts. The loosed pillow case wedged between the headboard and box springs, around your neck. The two of you dreaming I've set lit candles under the bed. And now, now I have.

