Sisyphus takes the day off

by Ed Higgins

what-ta-hell, fuck this he snorts brushing
the dust from his shoulders reeking sweat
a rictus grimace
bent with aching knees
ankles a mess
soles calloused
and slit.

a deserved glass of white wine to wash away the exhaustion yes, wash the guilt too hubris-cleverness offending Zeus hopeless addled dreams

God knows he can't be switched to a worse punishment every climb to the sky a bittersweet birdsong moments later fading into echo off eroding canyon walls his bruised heart over the years hardened to grey stitched pain in the winter a fleece of snow

Available online at "http://fictionaut.com/stories/ed-higgins/sisyphus-takes-the-day-off--2" $\!\!\!$

Copyright © 2023 Ed Higgins. All rights reserved.

adding to the slipperiness of the scree fuck this, he says again.