

some days are

by Ed Higgins

minotaur shit on your tongue smokestacks dumping acid rain on your already thinning hair your eyelashes pinned in upside down, backward you give wrong shaving directions to the mirror your brain's a wingless duck migrating east for lunch you eat the paper bag full unblinking knowledge of yourself the Milky Way curdled your cat unrolls both toilet paper rolls Escher frogs up & down your legs

Monday wants to be January, or July, anything old regrets text-message you, urgently: let's do lunch today bees up your nose building comb your brain a Red-cockaded woodpecker pecking to get out your smile a yellow Disney scarf with dwarfs one eye a 20 lb. yam the other an over-ripe avocado a small orange dog urinates on your toothbrush Canadian thistle blooming in your colon your saliva is once again formaldehyde gravy all life's explanations ooze of pinkeye, incurable two cups of coffee later many days are none of these.
