

Clocks

by Foster Trecost

His hands are old
But still function
As hands

They work even While the rest of Us sleep

And when we wake
They are working Already

He does not listen when
We wish time to Slow down

For him
Time is all
He has

