Acapella

by Gary Hardaway

The plague will fold the good and evil together into earth and ash.

Its odors of quicklime and pyre-smoke will curl commingled in acrid air.

It will show neither justice nor malice. It will know no mercy.

It will expend itself once too many bodies go cold for it to sustain its pathological fire.

Our music will become but variations on the same exasperated acapella mourning song.