

An Excoriated Sensibility

by Gary Hardaway

for SP on the recurrent anniversary of her birth

The machines of her perception tuned themselves to frequencies that peeled her skin and fatty tissue to expose the most sensitive nerves.

The wind and sun burned into her brain stem.

I have discovered a few of those wavelengths. I fear.

