

December Can Feel Like April Here

by Gary Hardaway

Today the isobars are far apart.
Flags hang limp and listless.
Condensation glazes grass and windshields.
A tracery of snail paths ornaments the sidewalk.
Peace breaks out across the roof-topped prairie
as the early fog yields to sun and blue.

