Deliberate Music

by Gary Hardaway

I can enjoy the linguistically lavish operations wherein the poet makes deliberate music out of words: the gaudy mysteries of Stevens, the o'erwrought speeches of the Bard.

My emulations always fail. At heart, I don't want bougainvillea nor blushing pilgrims but knives and sharp tined pitchforks piercing complacency with tidy slash and thrust