

Denouement

by Gary Hardaway

My mother was gone
long before the body quit.

Mourning was difficult
across the vacant years.

So much good should have
a tightly focused end;

it ought to end with more intensity and grief.

No one has the right
to script how someone dies.

