Goebbels in the Underworld with All His Pretty Ones

by Gary Hardaway

The universe extracts no retribution. It annihilates without a thought of evil/good, sin/virtue. Human need for righteous vengeance manufactured Hell and all the sorrowful and eternal underworlds only imaginations can map.

No Satanic bosom greeted Goebbels and the family when the dream (his dream) of a blond Reich dismembered itself inside the bunker—the small, impermanent underworld where suffering was brief.

One may take a punitive solace knowing he could see and hear the kinder shudder, gasp, and hiss their final almond-scented breaths as much-fucked Magda whimpered and collapsed. In this one has at least imagined justice.
