Last Poem

by Gary Hardaway

At some point in the locus of points it will be true. When the heart stops caring enough to squeeze pallid blood through or the voice that wants to be inscribed forgets the sounds

the vowels make or the shapes of the consonants.

Some one must be the last. Why not this one?

Available online at «http://fictionaut.com/stories/gary-hardaway/last-poem» Copyright © 2014 Gary Hardaway. All rights reserved.