

Mythologies of Self

by Gary Hardaway

We are trapped in the dark wood of our excoriated sensibility.
Abraded and tender, our nerves feel each day as an outrage.
We lie sleepless at night, enraged, and finger the keyboard
with a violated passion.

