

Small Budget Poems

by Gary Hardaway

Pure

What commerce doesn't corrupt dies its own unnoticed death, pure except for that implicit collapse in every particle or wave. Nothing's pure but nothing refuses to be imagined and can't be photographed or data-mined or talked to.

All the Pretty Poisons

Toxins make a body happy as if acceleration toward an end of consciousness is its own reward.

I'll take mine black.
Or tawny gold, no ice.

Day Off

Enjoy the shit
you didn't do
because the work

Available online at «<http://fictionaut.com/stories/gary-hardaway/small-budget-poems--3>»

Copyright © 2013 Gary Hardaway. All rights reserved.

you attend to all other days
sucks you dry
of vital fluids.

English Is an Entertaining Language

Affluence, effluence—
but a vowel's bit
of difference.

Freaks

Our species survived
as a freak of nature.
How unfortunate for nature.

Big Sky Apocalypse

When the collapse comes the Koch brothers will starve to death in Idaho or Montana

or one of those wingnut states where the sky

if you really look at it will tell you what a small piece of cosmic dust you are so you focus on fences

and tax rates

to save you from existential disaster.

