

Sunday Morning Series- 5: On Divine Intervention

by Gary Hardaway

What does God find abhorrent?
Apparently not the Roman torment of His people nor subsequent Roman torment of Wiccans, Huguenots, and Indios.
Not the Camps.
Not the Kmher Rouge.
Not the Cultural Revolution.
Not the genocide from sea to shining sea.

Disobedience under the influence of snakes and fruit,
impatience and thirst
among the desert rocks,
the reflexive move to steady a tilting ark,
and an over the shoulder glance back at home,
despite home's wickedness,
all merit Godly intervention, though.

For He's a jealous and mysterious God and just a little psycho.
