

Sunday Morning Series- 7: Sunday Morning Trifurcation

by Gary Hardaway

Omniscient God, fuck off.
Go light the corners of another's dark imagination. Leave me to my small despair and petty hatreds; my envy of the rich and smart, the rich and beautiful, the talented, the powerful, the charismatic, the even-tempered, the happy, the good.

All-seeing and forgiving Jesus, bite me.
Go diddle in the sand

to save some other sinner a death of stones. I never begged your bloody intercession, your diplomacy with chilly Father and his kick-ass Holy Ghost.

I am not Lazarus; leave me dead should you sashay past my corpse;

read the big black DNR.
And Ghost (a ruthless Ariel), kiss my ass, you witless sycophant, and fess up, Spook—was Mother Mary any good in bed? Or did the Big Dick do his own little nasty that time?
