

The January Oak

by Gary Hardaway

A few recalcitrant leaves wave in the northwest wind, tiny banners, browned
and wrinkled by time, but steadfast in the place each came to mark, almost fingered.

