

Threshold

by Gary Hardaway

For a brief time—an ice age, a set or two of plague years—the earth was almost rid of us.

But we proliferated back and swelled like a deadly virus in the blood and organs of the world until, by sheer mass, we poisoned what we need and soon-- none too soon-- the earth will finally be rid of us.

