

Witness

by Gary Hardaway

One is always at the periphery scribbling of things spied at the center.
The center never knows itself but is always and only itself.
Someone must bear witness at a comfortable remove.

The colors are always misremembered from the fringe but the audience bring their own colors, anyway.

