

left handed

by Gary Percesepe

suffocating snow

light extinguished all over the world brightness falls

from your sloped shoulders runs along the curve of your hip placing my hand in the crescent under your skin the moon is alive

