Invicta

by G.E. Simons

He would cry as he sang Christmas carols Booming musical tears from pale, wet eyes A conductor in Harris Tweed Above a folded Burberry mackintosh Cushioning the pews

Combed a thumb over slide rule moustache As military tears soaked into hymnbook pages Before midnight broadcasts Live from Canterbury cathedral Made those pale eyes dewy again

Available online at «http://fictionaut.com/stories/ge-simons/invicta» Copyright © 2014 G.E. Simons. All rights reserved.