

Plume

by Hazem Tagiuri

Gossamer wisps
bloom in the barren air.

Tendrils vainly clutch for earth
as they twirl and drift skywards.

Dissipating into the beyond,
leaving only faint spectres of scent.

