

The Power of Bad Words

by J.B. Lacombe

Her skirt is so short, said the teenage girls to each other. I was 7 years old. I said: she looks like a slut. They laughed; I blushed.

Later, the slut smiled at me. I tried to find the teenage girls but they were gone. I wanted to say: it's actually a pair of shorts.

