Cockroaches From Heaven

by Jerry Ratch

Cockroaches may be falling through the holes in the floorboards of heaven, but we will not be disturbed. We are agents, free and clear, even if a little bit mean.

I want to quit worrying about money, but the angels upstairs won't let me.

They keep singing, and treading the floorboards of heaven, causing the cockroaches of some previous life to descend unto us like the downloaded dust from a planet bigger than ours. Some mega superstar where true inspiration must come from lust, gluttony, greed, laziness, wrath, envy, even pride. Yes, pride.

That last one must be like the dinosaur of all cockroaches, hanging around the swimming pool on gigantic chaise lounges at the cockroach motel, on the underbelly of life. (Their home away from home.)