

Old Soul

by Jerry Ratch

She's an old soul who was scattered to the winds like a thousand butterflies and a moth
She has no center and flits from event to event and can't miss out on a thing, because crikey, what if she missed something important?

And the moth is a part of the soul that drifts into the auditorium during an orchestra concert and they have to go after her with a net during the intermission so that she doesn't cause another incident during the second half of the Bach Concerto in A Minor or B Minor either

