Real Love, Real

by Jerry Ratch

For the first time in her life She felt she understood The smell of a man.

The smell of white tulips, The taste of a persimmon In her mouth.

She remembered how married she felt To him, in that moment. How close To the earth, and ancient, and un-alone.