The Ghost's Tale

by Jerry Ratch

Don't worry, she said It's not blonde down there But she is wrong It's just as blonde down there As anywhere

The light down along her arms For instance The down along her cheek On the back of her neck Her thighs

Apparently I am nothing but Whispers, air The hairs barely stir When what's left Brushes past

Apparently I am nothing But whispers and air Anymore Maybe a faint Blonde hair on her arm